

Fledgling

Strings of words
formed into pattern
spring forth, take flight
like a young falcon
cautiously climbing,
then soaring, on the
wing of thought,
freeing the spirit
until the tethering critic's eye tightens, snaps back, ensnares and words are caged again.